TENNESSEE STATE PARKS STANDING STONE STATE PARK

Standing Stone State Park

and Forest covers nearly 11,000 acres on a hilly portion of the Cumberland Plateau of north-central Tennessee. The area's geology and natural diversity is significant. The rugged setting is dominated by oak-hickory hardwood forest. Hilltops offer visitors overlooks onto outstanding scenery, while deep wooded coves harbor abundant spring and summer wildflowers and an abundant assortment of mammals, birds, and reptiles and amphibians.

The park was developed during the Great Depression of the 1930's by the federal Works Progress Administration and the rustic architecture constructed by the Civilian Conservation Corps. The park takes its name from the "Standing Stone," a twelve-foot tall rock that stood in adjacent Putman County beside the Avery Trace, an early federal road, now State Highway 70. A portion of this landmark is still preserved in Monterey, Tennessee.

Cabins

Standing Stone is equipped with three types of cabins: Rustic (A), Timber lodge (AA), and Modern (AAA). The park has 14 Rustic Cabins that can accommodate from two to eight people April through October. Each of the three Timber lodge cabins can accommodate up to 10 people. These are open year-round, and have central heat and air-conditioning.
